British singer-songwriter Mike Holland releases his deeply personal new single, "Heaven's Waiting Room", on 4 December 2026 through Djinn Music UK.

Beginning as an intimate ballad, the song builds into an expansive electronica piece, with choirs, soaring synths and powerful bass. Produced at Djinn, its transformation mirrors a story that moves from quiet reflection and the pain of separation towards the overwhelming emotion of reunion.

Was he the father his son deserved?

A world beyond goodbye

Embracing the creative possibilities of new technology, Djinn Music UK accompanies the release with a full-length, AI-generated music video featuring a digital likeness of Holland. AI brings the song's imagined world to life on a scale that would be difficult to achieve through conventional filming. The video will be available on YouTube from release day.

Holland tells the story from the perspective of a father arriving at the gates of heaven, asking a question that matters more to him than any earthly achievement: was he the father his son deserved?

Through images of still water, heavenly gates and a timeworn bench, Holland imagines a place of extraordinary beauty made painful by separation. Heaven offers peace, but being apart from his son makes it impossible to feel at home. What could paradise mean without the people who made life worth living?

As the story unfolds, his son's light shines among billions of souls, drawing him back beneath the water. In their imagined reunion, the song finds its emotional resolution. Heaven becomes the feeling of holding his son again, hearing his heartbeat and sharing a breath.

> "For me, that question captures what matters most in life. It's not about money, success or achievements, it's only ever about the people you love."

The intimacy of the opening makes way for the scale and intensity of the electronic arrangement, carrying a private question into a sweeping expression of love, longing and connection.

Holland wrote the lyrics and melody, with Djinn helping develop the song from its initial idea into the finished track. The single continues a creative relationship that includes Holland's EP, Towards the Sun, which features singer-songwriter and model Samita on "Let It Go".

A father of two, Holland draws on his own family life to explore the legacy a parent hopes to leave. With "Heaven's Waiting Room", that legacy is measured in love: the hope that, when everything else falls away, his children will know how much they meant to him.

Single and music video released 4 December 2026 via Djinn Music UK.
