Singer-songwriter Samita brings a fresh approach to old-school R&B with "This Love", released on 9 January 2012 through Djinn Music.

A mid-tempo, ballad-influenced R&B song, "This Love" explores the frustration of a woman whose trust has been broken by the person she devotes herself to. At its heart is a message of strength: learning from hurt, picking up the pieces and finding a way forward.

Finding strength after broken trust.

A love for real R&B

Introduced as the first R&B release from Samita's album project Golden Touch, "This Love" reflects the music she grew up with and her desire to bring that influence into her own work.

> "I love this style of music. I grew up on it and I feel there isn't enough real RnB on the mainstream anymore. I want to try my hardest to bring it back and hopefully this is what this single will begin to do."

The song's message reaches beyond the pain of a relationship. Samita describes it as an encouragement to women who have been hurt to move forward, gain strength and learn from their experiences.

> "The message I really wanted to get out to the women in the world who have been hurt was that we do get hurt in relationships, but it's important to move forward and gain strength to pick up the pieces in order to learn from the experience."

One song, different perspectives

Samita and Djinn's belief in exploring different musical styles shapes the release's remix selection. Alongside the original song are exclusive remixes by DJ and producer Ammo and trance DJ and producer Tranquil Storm.

Mehi contributes the Bollyscape Remix, also featuring his vocals. A live bonus version accompanied by composer and pianist Beatrix Forbes offers another interpretation of the song.

"This Love" was released on 9 January 2012 through Djinn Music.
